

Why Do 87 Million Americans Love Their Credit Union?

Here's one member's reason...

"For more than 20 years, my credit union has been there to meet my financial needs. And, it's done it while treating me like family instead of an account number. That's something I never got from the regular banks."

That feeling of family is important to me. It's something I experience everyday with the people I work with as a fire fighter. And it's something I experience every time I visit my credit union and am greeted by name with a smiling face from someone I know and trust.

My credit union is there for me...and for my family too! It was there to offer accounts to my children and the one to make a loan to my daughter for her first car.

I can choose to do my financial business anywhere. I will continue to do it with those who look at me more than just an account number and balance.
